

Are you a lawyer looking for a way to learn a new area of law? Are you interested in working with international populations? Do you want to practice your counseling skills? Have you always wondered what immigration court is like? Do you want to use your Spanish to help young children who are alone in the United States? Do you need a fulfilling short term pro bono experience? Do you like working with children and their families?

Kids in Need of Defense (KIND) is an innovative new non-profit organization founded by Microsoft Corporation and actress and humanitarian Angelina Jolie. KIND is committed to helping provide competent and compassionate legal counsel to refugee and immigrant children who are in the United States without their parents or legal guardian. Many of these children came to the United States to escape from human rights abuses, domestic violence and trafficking.

KIND is looking for committed and compassionate pro bono attorneys to represent unaccompanied immigrant children in the United States. Immigration law experience is not required. KIND will train and mentor the pro bono attorney throughout the case. This is an opportunity to help change a child's life, and to learn new skills in the process. Most of our clients currently come from El Salvador, Guatemala, Mexico, and Honduras; therefore, we are especially interested in Spanish-speaking pro bono attorneys – but this is not a requirement.
